

Cooking on a sailboat can be fun, but while doing it you don't want to miss the beauty of the sea and other natural attractions. The key to onboard cooking is to keep it simple and easy. The last thing you want to be doing whilst on sailing holiday is slaving away in the galley.

Keeping a list of meals to eat underway makes sure that you have enough food for the entire passage. It helps to make the shopping list and minimizes waste. It also makes life easier for those that are not experts in cooking. It is easier for everyone to just execute instead of worrying about what to cook next.

General menu ideas

Breakfast

For the mornings, get bread and croissants. Eggs are always handy as they don't necessarily need to be kept in refrigerator and can double up as lunch material, as can cured meats and cheese. It is also useful to have some cereals, jam, fresh fruits and yoghurt.

Lunch

Get in some ham or cheese, perhaps olives to put out as a starter with some crusty bread, olive oil and balsamic. Fruit, vegetable salad or crisps with avocado could be also a good alternative.

Dinner

This should ideally be a hot meal. Perhaps some pan-fried fish with stir-fried vegetables; chicken and pepper with sour cream and rice; smoked salmon with pasta and sauce; or spaghetti with tomato sauce and cheese. Maybe take a jar of pesto along to use for pasta.

Menu plan

The below list contains a variety of simple dishes that can be prepared under 30 mins. It is ordered in a way that more easily perishable products are eaten first. If you expect bad weather, you can pre-cook them to have simple heat-and-eat options. The list will also evolve by region, as different foods are easy or hard to find.

The plan is for 9 days with the assumption that you will not be able to provision along the way. For longer trips, you can add additional dishes or double/triple the menu. You will have to freeze more ingredients and/or replace some of them with canned food (e.g. tomatoes).

Day 1: .....

Meal	Dish	Ingredients	Recipe
Breakfast	Scrambled eggs with bacon, and grilled tomatoes	Bread Butter Eggs (2-3 per person) Bacon Onion Salt & black pepper Tomatoes	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Fry bacon 2-3 minutes, then add sliced onion to the pan. Cook everything for another 3-4 minutes until the onion is soaked, then add eggs and sprinkle everything with a pinch of salt and black pepper.</li> <li>2. Slice tomato in half through the equator, then gently pan fry in virgin olive oil until tender. Sprinkle with herbs.</li> <li>3. Serve scrambled eggs with fresh bread &amp; butter.</li> </ol>
Lunch	Croissants with jam or cheese	Croissants Jam Yellow cheese	Server yourself style.
Dinner	Pan-seared salmon with gnocchi	Gnocchi Salmon Lemon Garlic Parsley Butter Sunflower oil Vegetables Salt & black pepper	<ol style="list-style-type: none"> <li>1. Season salmon with salt and black pepper. Squeeze 1-2 teaspoons of lemon juice over each filet.</li> <li>2. Heat the sunflower oil in a pan until hot. Place salmon filets' flesh side down, pressing them lightly. Sear, for 3-4 minutes until golden. Flip and sear the other side of each filet for 2 minutes. Add in the butter, chopped garlic and parsley, some lemon juice and lemon slices. Stir the butter and garlic around each filet.</li> <li>3. Continue to cook the salmon for a further 1-2 minutes, or until the salmon reaches desired doneness. Season with salt and black pepper to your taste, and add more lemon juice if desired.</li> <li>4. Drizzle the butter over each filet.</li> <li>5. Fry pan gnocchi in oil.</li> <li>6. Server everything with some vegetables if you like.</li> </ol>

Tea and/or coffee go on top of every dish. Besides meals, there are always a couple of grab-as-you-need options. There's fruit, as long as it lasts, either in a bowl on the counter or at the top of the fridge. A dedicated locker holds snacks from crackers to nuts and dried fruit.

- Your favourite treats (eg. hot chocolate mix, pudding cups, jelly etc.)

Water & drinks shopping list

- Bottled water ..... L (still); .....L (sparkling)
In total 3L / day / person (account for more if you sail in the tropics: 3,5L)
All drinking water in bottles or jerry cans to have an independent water source in case of tanks problem (eg. leak, contamination), especially if you don't carry watermaker
- Coca-cola in small cans (14x) – works also as a cure for stomach issues
- Drinks (beer, wine, rum etc.) – Buy individually. Note that drinking alcohol at sea is not permitted so take it only for longer stops

Expendables & Cleaning supplies shopping list

- Toilet paper (14x, ~0.5 roll / person / 2 day)
- Paper towel (8x, 1 roll / day)
- Kitchen towels (2x)
- Garbage bags (large and small)
- Long neck lighter and matches
- Biodegradable washing up liquid
- Sponges for washing dishes
- Sponge (2x big one for car washing)
- Coffee filters
- Disinfectant gel
- Wet cleaning wipes and handkerchiefs
- Duct tape (3M)
- Electrical duct tapes
- Bicarbonate of soda
- Foil / baking paper
- Balsamic vinegar (cooking, cleaning and treating jellyfish stings)
- Liquid soap with dispenser (1 for each head)
- Window cleaning spray
- Ziplock bags set (to keep things sealed up, protected against the open sea air, and for freezing)
- Aloe gel for sunburn
- Sun cream
- Ceramic frying pan and wooden spoon (if you are on a chartered boat, these are always in a catastrophic condition - no one should eat Teflon)

*Vegetables and fruits should not be rotten or molden and not very ripe so that they last longer

**When buying cans, tins and jars make sure the lid is not swollen to avoid dangerous food poisoning.

The amounts stated in the list are for 7 people and 9 days in total. The list should be adjusted to the number of people on board, lengths of the trip, crew preferences (e.g. vegetarians), allergies amongst the crew, refrigerator and freezer capacity.

When storing each item on board, write down the location of each item so it can be easily found, e.g. Pantry (P), Refrigerator (R), Freezer (F), Bidge (B), Galley lockers (G), Saloon lockers port/starboard (S-P, S-S), head (H). Alternatively, use a separate list / draw a "chart".

Tips & Tricks

- Label water bottles with each crew member's name to monitor how much they are drinking. Even better if everyone has their own graduated drinking vessel. Dehydration can lead to tiredness, muscle cramps, insomnia and decreased physical and mental performance, particularly around decision-making, so drinking enough should be a top priority.
- Keep a bottle of water on deck and take regular sips during watch to keep you watered.
- Monitor and note the consumption of all consumables (water, food, fuel, gas) on a regular basis. For example, keep a counter on how much bottled water you have used. Write down every single bottle that was picked from the storage. This can go out of hand pretty fast, especially in bigger crew sizes. You don't want to discover that you are out of drinking water halfway through especially if you don't have a watermaker.
- Use seawater for washing dishes, boiling carbs, taking showers (swim or bucket over the head on the aft deck) and only rinse with fresh water at the end. For some dishes, you can also opt to use paper towels instead of plates to avoid washing. Having at least one seawater tap on board makes things easier.
- Pack food in glass containers or ziplock bags to keep things sealed up and protected against the open air.
- Bread does not fare well in the humid environment of boating so buy fresh bread whenever you can or bake your own bread (you can buy ready-made yeast bread mix). Things like English muffins and bagels will likely survive longer but they are also not as tasty.
- Many grocery stores offer delivery services, allowing you to arrange a drop-off of all your groceries right at the marina.
- Eating three or four smaller meals a day will help level out your calorie intake over time and also guard against that dozy feeling after eating a big meal.
- The more fresh food you can vacuum-pack and freeze, the better. Research make-ahead meals that might be nice to bring if your yacht has a freezer.
- Don't pack food you don't like: ideally, try it before you buy.
- Pre-cook meals for the first few days at sea. It takes three days on average for crews to get their sea legs and fully settle down.
- To save space in lockers, use bilges to store durable stuff like water bottles and canned drinks. Store other food items in easily accessible and dry lockers. Any tins to be kept in the bilge should have the contents marked in indelible pen and their labels removed to prevent the possibility of soggy labels clogging bilge pump strainers. Regardless, the bilge or any locker used for storing food should be dry. Even cans will rust quickly in the sea air when dampened (only really a factor for very long trips).
- Treat water and water tanks with chlorine if you are uncertain of the water quality (e.g. in the tropics). But don't use it for aluminium tanks. The easiest is to use water purification tablets.
- Keep as much packaging off your boat as possible. Keep cardboard boxes on the dock and empty them there to ensure no cockroaches or other insect eggs get on your boat. Cockroaches and other insects love to deposit their eggs in cardboard corners, corrugations or Tetra Paks. Remove things like cereal and crackers from their cardboard boxes as well and seal them in zip-loc bags instead.
- Store eggs in plastic trays instead of the usual cardboard boxes to prevent bugs. Turn eggs twice a week to prevent the yolks from settling and making them turn bad.
- Store vegetables and fruits in netting so they are well ventilated.

- Weight should be your first priority in deciding what goes where. Heavy things should be stowed low and near the centre of the boat to preserve the stability of the boat.
- Prepare a stowage map of where things are.
- Write down crew preferences in terms of drinks (coffee, tea, with/without sugar or milk, etc.).
- Label each mug with a different colour (tape) to avoid frequent washing.
- Wash all fruits and vegetables so as not to bring any bugs on board.
- Store bananas separate from other fruits. One ripe banana will cause the other bananas and nearby fruits to ripen. You can delay the domino effect to some extent by separating the bananas off into smaller "hands" and storing them in different places, away from any other fruit and vegetables. Likewise, if your bananas or other fruit and vegetables are very green and don't show any signs of ripening you can help them along by placing a ripe banana next to them.
- In marinas with an abundance of cockroaches, sprinkle your mooring lines with insecticidal powder.
- In infested marinas, disinfect the soles of your shoes before coming aboard to avoid any risk of bringing in cockroach eggs. A small basin kept handy with water and some disinfectant added should do the trick. Likewise, having shoes to be used only aboard is another good idea.

Have a plan of what you are going to eat / drink if a freezer or refrigerator breaks down, gas runs out or the water tank is leaked or contaminated.
